ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It takes a village to raise a child and write a thesis. I wish to express my sincere gratitude to the village that has prepared me, encouraged me, and celebrated with me throughout this entire process.

First, I wish to thank each member on my outstanding thesis committee who each played a vital role in this process. To Cathy Beck, who first inspired me to consider service-learning as a pedagogy, I am grateful for your boundless guidance and moral support. You are a gifted teacher, scholar, and friend. To Marta Antón, thank you for agreeing to guide an English graduate student while balancing the demands of your own students and research projects. Your personal insights and experiences with service-learning in a second language setting were extremely valuable during critical stages of my project. To Thom Upton, I am sincerely grateful that you embraced my scholarly interest in service-learning and encouraged me to pursue graduate studies. Your professional guidance and careful attention to each stage of this project has made this process not only professional, but enjoyable as well. Last to Ulla Connor – the unofficial committee member – thank you for your writing assessment training and guidance in quantitative research methods that were instrumental in the design of this project.

Second, I wish to thank Carrie Murphy and the rest of the staff of School on Wheels who so enthusiastically agreed to train international students to serve as tutors. You introduced them to an unseen side of American culture and nurtured a spirit of volunteering which has empowered them to make a difference in their own communities.

Last, but not least, I wish to thank my family. To my mother-in-law, Sherry Hamstra, I am thankful for the countless hours you spent entertaining my children and making dinner so that I could finish my thesis. To my mother and first writing coach, Susie Pike, I am grateful for you lovingly reading each word of this thesis and for always being my biggest cheerleader. Thank you for your continual support in all that I do. To my three sons; Will, Zach, and Sam; all of whom were born during this process, I thank them for their youthful optimism and willingness to share their mother's attention with this fourth "baby." Finally, to my husband, James, I am blessed by your continuing support of my endless educational pursuits. Thank you for seeing me not only as a wife and a mother, but as a scholar and a professional. Your sacrifice and dedication make my charmed life possible.
